3. The Sun Never Sets

Featuring a 1943 Willys Jeep, this exhibit traces the development of the military vehicle during WWII. By war's end, the Jeep had become the "goodwill ambassador for the United States," carrying everything and everyone from privates to generals and presidents.

4. The Allison Collection

Photographs in this gallery portray the war and its impact on both soldiers and society during World War II. These images are selected from the 4,600 photographs collected during the war by James Allison, a sports writer for the Houston Press. The rest of the collection can be viewed on our website.

5. War and Remembrance

The 1911 United Confederate Veterans reunion in Little Rock was the largest veterans reunion ever held. More than 100,000 people attended the event, including approximately 11,000 aged veterans who camped in the park surrounding the Arsenal Building.

6. Capital in Crisis

This Civil War gallery begins with the debate over secession in Arkansas, which led to a standoff between Federal authorities and local militia on these grounds, known as the Arsenal Crisis. The exhibit also covers Arkansas's involvement in the Civil War and Little Rock's capture by Union forces in September 1863.

7. David O. Dodd

17-year-old David O. Dodd was hanged as a spy in 1864 by Union forces near the Arsenal Building. Was he a boy martyr for the Confederacy, or a spy justly convicted and executed? The exhibit features the 1911 David O. Dodd stained glass window.

8. The Camden Expedition

Launched from the Arsenal grounds in the spring of 1864, the Camden Expedition was a military disaster for Union forces who were forced back to Little Rock after only 40 days.

9. First Call

Posters were used in World War I to justify U.S. involvement in the war and encourage citizens to support home-front efforts such as war bond drives and the American Red Cross. This exhibit opens November 7th.

10. The Aesthetic Club

This hallway focuses on the Aesthetic Club founded in 1883 by a group of Little Rock women. The club was created for self-education and to help improve the community. In 1894, the club began meeting in the Arsenal Building and have continued to meet here for more than a hundred years.

11. Conflict in Crisis

On loan from the MacArthur Memorial, this exhibit covers President Harry Truman's dismissal of General Douglas MacArthur in 1951 and the controversy that ensued. The event created an enduring debate regarding civilian authority over the military and the concepts of limited war versus total war.

ABOUT THE MACARTHUR MUSEUM OF ARKANSAS MILITARY HISTORY

The Arsenal Building was constructed in 1840 as part of a frontier military post. The building originally housed weapons, munitions, cannons, cannonballs, and gunpowder. In 1868, the Arsenal Building was converted into housing for officers and their families. In 1879, Captain Arthur MacArthur was stationed here, and on January 26, 1880, Douglas MacArthur was born in this building. He became one of the greatest military leaders of the 20th Century. In 1892, the military post was turned into Little Rock's first public park, and all of the structures except the Arsenal Building were either moved or destroyed. In 2001, the Arsenal Building opened as the MacArthur Museum of Arkansas History, dedicated to preserving our state's rich military heritage. The museum is operated under Little Rock Parks and Recreation.
